

STUDENT RESEARCH AND AWARDS

Departmental Awards

Since 1984, the Sociology and Anthropology Department has awarded our most outstanding sociology students with the Frank E. Luksa award. Beginning in 2002, the department has also honored our most outstanding anthropology students with an award. Initially, the anthropology award was also named in honor of Frank E. Luksa. In 2006, the award in anthropology was renamed the Gwen Kennedy Neville award.

Students are chosen on the basis of their GPA and their overall embodiment of the department's core priorities. These priorities include participating in faculty-student research opportunities, presenting papers at regional and/or national conferences, and contributing to campus organizations that connect with the department's focus.
