

southwestern.edu

Raquel Saenz

~2 minutes

Dr. Raquel Sáenz Ortiz is originally from New Mexico and began her teaching career as a 6th grade Social Studies teacher in South Texas, across the border from Reynosa, Tamaulipas, where her father was raised. Over the past decade, Raquel taught in a dual language elementary school in Nicaragua and an alternative high school in Boston. While teaching in Boston, Raquel became immersed in organizing efforts for Ethnic Studies and has been part of a collective of educators designing Ethnic Studies curriculum for Boston Public Schools. Throughout her career as an educator, both K-12 and higher education, Raquel has sought to root curriculum in student identities and experiences, while also seeking to support students in building critical consciousness. At Southwestern, Raquel teaches Foundations and Curriculum of American Schools, as well as most of the methods courses for pre-service secondary teachers. She is also the Director of Field Based Placements for pre-service secondary teachers.

Education:

PhD, Curriculum and Instruction, Boston College

MA, Historic Interdisciplinary Studies, Universidad de Guanajuato (México)

BA, Anthropology, Colorado College